WHAT IF . . .

What if Barack Obama had told us during his campaign what he would do--and has actually done in his first 300 days in office? Would he have been elected? Phyllis Schlafly raised these issues in her article at Eagleforum.org, published October 16, 2009. Following are some of the issues she cited, along with others we have added.

What if Obama had told us . . .

- he would appoint 34 czars, not vetted or confirmed, and over whom Congress has no authority
- his pick for green jobs czar [Van Jones] had admittedly been a Communist/activist and black nationalist
- his pick for science czar [John Holdren] advocated in a college textbook for compulsory “green abortions” to control population growth
- his top White House advisors would be individuals with radical, even openly Marxist views
- some of his closest advisors would be persons who came from the highest levels of corrupt Chicago politics
- his Communications Director would state publicly that one of her favorite political philosophers is Mao Tse Tung

What If Obama had told us he would . . .

- take over the automobile industry faster than any socialist dictator in history ever nationalized an industry
- fire the CEO of General Motors and promptly replace him with a Democrat Party campaign contributor
- close down thousands of profitable automobile dealerships, a majority of them Republican-owned

What if Obama had told us . . .

- that his $787 billion stimulus package is a scam because it does not create private-sector jobs (as he claimed it would do)
- that the unemployment rate would rise to nearly 10 percent, with 15 million Americans unemployed and another 11 million under-employed—during the first 9 months of his term

What if Obama had told us . . .

- that his pick for chief State Department lawyer [Harold Koh] would advocate integrating foreign law into U.S. law, making it binding on U.S. citizens

What if we had known . . .

- that Obama had no clue about how to proceed as commander-in-chief of the war in Afghanistan--a war he has consistently characterized as “a necessary war”
- that Obama would not speak to the U.S. commander in the field for 70 days, and would ignore the general’s urgent request for reinforcements for more than six weeks

What if we had known . . .

- Obama would have the government guarantee 90 percent of all U.S. mortgages, imposing $5 trillion in off-budget debt on U.S. taxpayers who had faithfully made the payments on their own mortgages
- that he would have the government take over 80 percent of all student loans at a cost to taxpayers of $1 trillion over the next decade

What if Obama had admitted . . .

- that his health care plan would include the same provisions for which he lambasted candidates Hillary Clinton (for a federal mandate requiring every American to buy health insurance) and John McCain (for a tax on high-cost employer-based plans)
- that his federal health plan would pay for all abortions without regard to the Hyde Amendment and provide full health care to immigrants without requiring proof of legal residence

If Obama had campaigned on . . .

- increasing federal spending and debt from a multi-billion-dollar level to multi-trillions
- wiping out the Republican welfare reform of 1996
- increasing annual welfare spending by 39 percent to almost $1 trillion a year by the end of his first term

WOULD HE HAVE BEEN ELECTED?
